

BOLD STEPS

Strengthening lives and communities

William G. McGowan

Was illiam G. McGowan (1927-1992) was a pioneering entrepreneur and the motivating force behind the success of MCI. During his 24 years as the head—and very public face—of MCI, William McGowan expanded the company from a struggling local radio service to a $9.5 billion telecommunications giant. He was instrumental in the toppling of the Ma Bell monopoly, and thanks to his dogged efforts and successful antitrust litigation, the previously regulated telecommunications industry was transformed into a business open to competition.

A man born of modest means, William McGowan's business achievements were remarkable. He recognized, though, that with his success came great responsibility, and so was committed to providing others hope through opportunity. He believed in the power of education, the promise of medical research and the urgency of community need. He died in 1992 after a six-year battle with heart disease that included two heart attacks and a heart transplant. Soon after William McGowan's death, the McGowan Fund was established to provide financial support to organizations that reflect the visions, concerns and life experiences of its benefactor, and have proven success in changing and improving societal conditions.

Vision

To impact lives today, create sustainable change and empower future generations to achieve their greatest potential.

Mission

The William G. McGowan Charitable Fund brings our vision to life through grant-making efforts in three program areas: Healthcare and Medical Research, Education and Community Initiatives for Those Most Vulnerable. We give priority to programs that have demonstrated success, have measurable outcomes and a plan for sustainability, and aim to end cycles of poverty and suffering.

Resolute in our belief in the power of partnerships or collaborative efforts to maximize impact, we embrace opportunities to work with other funders in our program areas, and look for funding opportunities that share our philosophy and explore the possibility of joint projects with other non-profit organizations.

Letter from the President

Dear Friends,

I am proud that over the past two years, the McGowan Fund has generated exceptional momentum and extended its reach and efficacy. Through careful, focused grant making, we continue to seed and nurture worthy grantees. Via the McGowan Fellows Program, we are also building an effective community of future ethical leaders.

In all that we do, we are inspired by the life and work of my late husband, Bill McGowan. Bill forcefully demonstrated that human-centric vision, bolstered by effective tools and key resources, generates world-changing results. His decade-long legal and regulatory campaign that freed America's phone system for healthy competition meant consumers finally had choices. Bill's victory on behalf of MCI also opened the pathway to progress in communications technology.

As president of the Board of the McGowan Fund, I can confirm that we are responsible stewards of Bill's legacy. Our $170 million family foundation benefits from the talent of 15 deeply engaged board members. We share a comprehensive vision for the Fund and have developed the skills to make it real, selectively awarding $7 million to $8 million in grants annually, in the six communities where our trustees reside. Throughout this report, you will read a sampling of our grant recipients, high-performing non-profits achieving measurable results in three key areas: education for under served youth, health/medical research with a focus on cardiac care, and addressing immediate human needs.

Our McGowan Fellows Program, established in 2010, differs from these other initiatives: Fellows are not an at-risk population. But by enlisting top second-year year MBA students who demonstrate societal concerns, we increase the possibility that a wide range of people will obtain good jobs and wages and be self-sustaining in a more humane society.

The Fellows' community expands by 10 each year; by 2014 they will be 50 strong. Each year, members of prior classes demonstrate their ongoing commitment and support by signing on to Fellows' projects. We also work closely with our 10 academic partners—America's top-ranked business schools—and with other exceptional leaders and groups to move this program to ever higher levels.

In each of our chosen areas of concentration, the Board of the William G. McGowan Charitable Fund continues moving forward at a measured and forceful pace. Our efforts continue to be rewarded by excellent near-term outcomes, and future promise.

Please enjoy this 2012-2013 Annual Report. I believe you will share our enthusiasm for the worthwhile projects that have merited our support.

Sue Gin-McGowan
President

Letter from the Executive Director

Dear Friends,

The past two years were a time of transition and growth for the Fund, and we are excited to share our news with you. Since our last Report, the Fund's board of directors made the decision to increase our grant-making focus in organizations and programs that produce long-term, sustainable results. The Fund will continue supporting organizations that provide support for immediate needs, but with the intent of transitioning recipients to a stabilized, maintainable environment.

We have always been a mindful grant-making body, performing thorough due diligence on all grantees and requiring that all community partners produce measurable, quantifiable results. As such, the transition achieved over the past two years is a natural evolution of our existing activity. It is also a powerful show of the Fund's commitment to the individuals and communities we serve. We chose BOLD STEPS as the theme for this Annual Report because it reflects both the board's accomplishments of the past two years and our vision for the coming years.

You can read about the most significant example of our new focus on page 20, where we highlight an exciting collaboration with the American Heart Association. The Fund will serve as the inaugural funder of Healthy Way to Grow, an innovative initiative that will provide technical assistance to child care centers across the country with the goal of decreasing obesity among children ages birth to 5 years old.

Healthy Way to Grow also represents the Fund's continued commitment to collaborative philanthropy. Recognizing that the scope of most social problems is beyond the realm of any single organization, we are increasingly looking to be strategic with our grants, allowing grantees to leverage our support for additional funding. With the American Heart initiative, the board's hope is that other funders will see the evaluative component and research that has gone into this data-and results-driven program and expand the program beyond the boundaries of the six pilot communities.

All of the progress of the past two years occurred in conjunction with the celebration of our 20-year anniversary. It was inspiring to reflect on all that the Fund—under the direction and careful management of the board of directors—has achieved since our founding. Our accomplishments include more than $115 million to hundreds of organizations in our six geographic regions.

The anniversary also provided an opportunity to renew our commitment to the legacy of our benefactor, William G. McGowan. Mr. McGowan was a powerful force in the business world, best known for his unrelenting determination to disband the telecommunications monopoly. His success was propelled by his ability to envision possibility; and the Fund, in that spirit, is now committed to enabling possibility through long-term and sustainable positive change in the communities we serve.

McGOWAN FELLOWS PROGRAM

In 2010, the William McGowan Fund board of directors launched the McGowan Fellows program to support the achievements of business students and next-generation leaders committed to the furthering of ethical business practices. With the induction of the Class of 2012 and Class of 2013, the McGowan Fellows community grew to 30 and the program expanded to accommodate the growing alumni community.

In 2012, the Fund launched a Fellows newsletter to foster community and dialogue among the Fellows. Also in 2012, the Fund dedicated a full-time staff person to manage the program and sustain the community as it grows. Under the management of the new staff person, the Fund is focusing on creating spaces and opportunities for ongoing conversations among Fellows and alumni, with the goal of sustainable, long-term inclusion and participation of alumni.

As part of the fellowship experience, each class of Fellows collaborates on a year-long group project. The Fellows project provides an opportunity to work collaboratively with like-minded peers on a program of meaningful social impact. Throughout the year, the Fellows meet weekly via conference call and wrap-up the project with a face-to-face weekend working session. The year-long experience strengthens Fellows' relationships and spurs additional conversation and engagement. The Classes of 2012 and 2013 completed work initiated by the Class of 2011, finalizing a modular ethics curriculum for high school students. The Class of 2013 made the final recommendation to the McGowan board of directors, offering three scenarios for distribution and delivery of the curriculum.

McGowan Symposium on Business Leadership and Ethics

In November 2012 and November 2013, the McGowan Fellows gathered with the Fund's board of directors, faculty from the Fellows University partners, and leaders from business and academia for the annual McGowan Symposium on Business Leadership and Ethics. The symposium provides Fellows the opportunity to engage in meaningful, sometimes challenging conversations with their peers, past Fellows, and influential thought leaders.

The 2012 symposium, which was co-hosted by Northwestern University Kellogg School of Management and held in Evanston, IL, explored values-based leadership. The 2013 symposium, which was co-hosted by the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth in Hanover, NH, turned its attention to the future, exploring the challenges ethical leaders will face in a business culture shaped by rapidly evolving technology and societal expectations.

INITIATIVES IN EDUCATION

For many, including William McGowan, education is the gateway to opportunity, and academic achievement is the path to long-term success. Yet students who live in poverty and disadvantaged neighborhoods face many barriers to academic success, and wide achievement disparities persist for economically challenged students. Through our Initiatives in Education programming, the Fund has long worked to address those achievement gaps, and reduce disproportions in graduation rates and college success.

During the 2012-2013 grant-making period, the Fund continued its focus on academic achievement, honing in on partners with evidence-based programs and demonstrated success in meeting achievement standards, graduating students, and equipping students for college success. With research showing that poverty-stricken children who read below grade level in third grade are three times as likely to drop out of high school as students who have never been poor, the need for academic-achievement programs among the underserved is urgent. Our renewed focus on academic success and grade-level achievement reflects the Fund's belief in the importance of a continuum-of-care process that supports youth through each stage of education and into post-secondary achievement.

By the Hand Club For Kids

By the Hand Club For Kids is a Chicago-based after-school program that provides tutoring and support to children and teens in the city's most under-resourced neighborhoods, including the Austin community. By the Hand Club emphasizes academic excellence, with a focus on raising grades and standardized-test performance, while nurturing mind, body, and spirit. "Our mission is to take kids by the hand in first grade and walk with them all the way through high school, supporting them until they can walk independently," said Donnita Travis, founder and executive director.

Since 2009, the McGowan Fund has walked along with By the Hand Club, helping to expand services and grow the Austin program. When the Fund first started supporting By the Hand Club, Austin served 176 children in first through eighth grades. In 2013, Austin served 264 first through 12th graders in a newly constructed, 26,000-square-foot building. "They've helped us grow with our kids. We now have a college prep program and our first class of Austin high school graduates, 88 percent of whom are in college this fall," Travis said.

Because literacy is closely linked to academic success, By the Hand Club recently launched a comprehensive literacy program with the McGowan Fund's support. Each site now has a reading specialist who works one-on-one with kids to improve their vocabulary, grammar, sentence formation, and comprehension. As a result, 34 percent of all Austin kids and 96 percent of kids who have been with the Austin club for four consecutive years experienced an increase in their ISAT Reading performance.

"Our culture is people focused, but we are results driven," Travis said. "We hold each other accountable in everything we do, and appreciate that the Fund expects similar accountability. We think that accountability is the best way to serve our kids."

COMMUNITY INITIATIVES FOR THOSE MOST VULNERABLE

S ince its inception, the Fund has been a strong supporter of programs that serve the most vulnerable members of our communities, including the elderly, disabled, homeless, and those suffering from poverty. Following the economic downturn of 2008—when many found themselves out of work just when state and federal funding for social services was being slashed—our community partners experienced increased demand for assistance. The Fund responded proactively, increasing grants for community initiatives that provided food, shelter, clothing, and crisis support to individuals and families in need.

Over the past two years, the Fund made a mindful shift to support more organizations that focus on sustainable change for program participants. Our board recognized that in order to end the cycle of poverty and homelessness, individuals must have basic needs met and be provided pathways to advancement. Without abandoning our mission of meeting the immediate needs of at-risk community members, the Fund increasingly looked to programs that focus on job training, education, wellness, and community-building. Together with these partners, we are working to improve the self-sufficiency and long-term success of individuals and families in our communities.

Community Initiatives for Those Most Vulnerable

Grantee Spotlight Community LINC

For 25 years, Community LINC has been helping families in Kansas City, MO, escape homelessness and poverty. In 2012, with support from the McGowan Fund, Community LINC launched the Interim Housing and Aftercare Program, which provides families transitional housing and supportive services for 120 days with intensive follow-up services for an additional nine months. Aftercare services help participants regain self-sufficiency with mental health counseling and customized employment plans as well as coaching in life skills, healthy lifestyles, and budgeting.

With the new program, Community LINC will be able to serve twice as many families—up to 135 families per year—while increasing participants' likelihood of success and self-sufficiency, according to Jeannine Short, senior director of programs and services. "We help them realize if they are proactive and problem-solve. When they know where to turn for help, they can prevent the cycle of homelessness," she said.

This focus on long-term success, as well as the non-profit's long commitment to results measurement, made the program a natural fit for the McGowan Fund, said Teresa McClain, Community LINC's associate executive director. "We view the Fund as a very analytical funder and very serious stewards of their resource. They want to invest in something that works and they want to see the results to back that up," she explained.

The program is proving successful, with 80 percent of participating families moved to permanent housing and 88 percent of adults employed by the program's end. "The McGowan Fund's grant was the seed money that allowed this to get off the ground," McClain said. "It was a show of faith that we were able to leverage for additional funding. Now, we're seeing tremendous success."

HEALTHCARE & MEDICAL RESEARCH INITIATIVES

The years 2012 and 2013 marked a time of exciting progress for the McGowan Fund Healthcare and Medical Research program area. We continued our support of cardiac research, funding pioneering approaches to heart disease treatment. Also, after several years of collaborative planning, the Fund entered into a large-scale childhood obesity/heart disease prevention program with the American Heart Association. The five-year grant to the new Healthy Way to Grow program represents the largest award given to healthcare prevention in the Fund's history, and the groundbreaking initiative heralds a new direction in large-scale, health-promotion programming.

The Fund continued support of preventive approaches through Rush University Medical Center's ELM program. This lifestyle-change program is a research study of patients with metabolic syndrome, a collection of risk factors that lead to diabetes and heart disease. ELM helps participants adopt healthy habits through education, coaching, and peer support. After a successful, multi-year trial, ELM moved into the sustainability component of the program with McGowan support.

inally, throughout 2012-2013, we continued to support ommunity partners that serve the uninsured and inderinsured, helping to fill gaps in the available lealthcare safety net.

Grantee Spotlight

American Heart Association

One in three U.S. children is now overweight or obese, and one-quarter of preschool children are obese or overweight. Obese children as young as 3 years show indicators for developing heart disease later in life. Recognizing that early intervention is the key to reversing these statistics, in 2013 the McGowan Fund provided inaugural funding for a major initiative aimed at decreasing obesity among young children. Healthy Way to Grow is a joint program of the American Heart Association and Nemours, a non-profit children's health system, that will provide resources, training, and support to child care centers across the country.

"Healthy Way to Grow is built on the fundamental premise that consistent, lifelong healthy habits are the most prudent and effective way to achieve and maintain ideal cardiovascular health," said Nancy Brown, CEO, American Heart Association. "Children who adopt these habits at the earliest ages stand a much better chance of becoming healthy adults."

The program will launch in the McGowan Fund's six communities in 2013 with the goal of expanding to more communities over the coming years. It will help child care centers improve physical activity, nutrition and screen time practices, resulting in healthier children, better-informed parents and caregivers, and ultimately, a reduction of childhood obesity in those communities.

"While organizations like the American Heart Association and Nemours have the knowledge and expertise to develop impactful programs that can help reverse this epidemic, we do not always have the financial resources to implement them," said Jennifer Weber, director of Healthy Way to Grow for the American Heart Association. "Thanks to the McGowan Fund, we are now able to launch a program that will confront the problem at its earliest stages."

Grant-Making & Geographic Guidelines

The McGowan Charitable Fund awards grants within the following parameters:

Education

Because William McGowan was a recipient of support to complete his final year of education, and because he deeply believed in the power of education to transform lives:

We support exceptional business students through the McGowan Fellows Program, and support exceptional Pre-K through 12 programs that creatively address the current challenges in our educational system for the purposes of promoting retention and graduation rates in underserved or underachieving populations.

Community Initiatives for Those Most Vulnerable

Because of William McGowan's belief in the power of community, and because of his actions in building community:

We support programs in our communities that address qualityof-life challenges for the elderly, for those who are victims of abuse, those who are disabled, and those who suffer from hunger, homelessness, unemployment or illness.

Healthcare & Medical Research

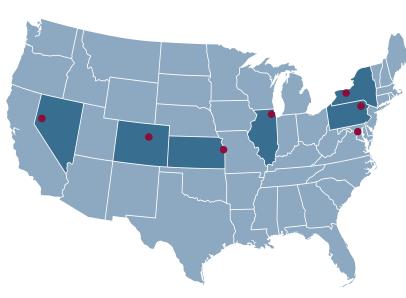

Because of William McGowan's cardiac condition and heart transplant:

We support programs and research projects that address the challenges and needs in cardiac healthcare.

We do not support programs in the following areas, except by invitation: Arts; Capital Campaigns; Embryonic Stem Cell Research; Endowments; Grant-making Foundations; Multi-year Grants; National Organizations; Salary Support; Sports Programs.

Geographic Guidelines
